

IGNITES

All that's HOT in the mutual fund industry

Solutions to stay out front.™

PFPC

Welcome Back temporary

- Home
- Search our Archives
- Subscriptions
- Print Today's Issue
- Industry Tools
- Contact Us
- My Saved Articles
- Top Read Articles

- Scandal Coverage
- Ignites' People

LIPPER Fund Lookup

Go

FUND & ETF SCREENER
LIPPER RESEARCH
LIPPER DAILY INDICES
LIPPERWEB.COM

Related Articles From Our Archives

Aug. 11, 2004
[GAO: SEC Should
Overhaul Rule Proposals](#)

Aug. 05, 2004
[Large Firms Losing Battle
Against Timers](#)

Jun. 15, 2004
Fidelity Taking On Omnibus Exemptions

Keyword Search:

GO

Last 5 Issues:

Mon Jan 24

ARTICLE OPTIONS

PREVIOUS PRINT SAVE EMAIL NEXT

From the Archives

Investor Coalition Targets Omnibus Accounts

Article published on August 12, 2004

The Coalition of Mutual Fund Investors, a lobbying group representing shareholders, says that omnibus trading accounts have facilitated market timing and that brokerages should be required to disclose more information about the accounts. So reports The Street.com.

The group, which was formed in reaction to the fund scandals, says efforts to deter market timing will fall short unless regulators force brokerages to report all customer trades made each day through an omnibus account. It says the anonymous trading in such accounts hides the identity of timers and could thwart the SEC's proposal to make fund firms impose a 2% redemption fee on all frequent trades.

According to a survey conducted by the coalition, many large fund firms state in their prospectuses that they cannot effectively police their omnibus accounts. Since thousands of individual trades are consolidated into one big trade, funds cannot single out timers and timing activity.

While the SEC's redemption fee proposal would Accurate. Reliable.

LANA — Mutual Funds
Decision Support Tool

CLICK HERE

Headlines for August 1

- ▶ SEC Probe Wipes Out Stable
- ▶ [Calif. Court Ruling Complica
Marketing](#)
- ▶ [Judge Refuses to Dismiss Cas
Trader](#)
- ▶ Art Emerging as New Fund C
- ▶ Correction:

May. 10, 2004
ICI: 2% Redemption Fee Too Small

make omnibus accounts more transparent. Niels Holch, the coalition's executive director and a partner in the Washington law firm McGuinness & Holch, says it still leaves an opening for timers. It would make brokers disclose customer trades made in an omnibus account to funds on a weekly basis, rather than the daily reporting the coalition recommended.

Sen. Peter Fitzgerald (R-Ill.), who introduced a fund reform bill, has backed the coalition's call for daily disclosure. Brokerages will probably oppose the proposal, and financial firms maintain that omnibus accounts protect the privacy of all their clients.

(News summaries based on original reports in other publications are prepared by the IGNITES.com staff and are not created, sponsored, approved or endorsed by the publications to which the original reports are attributed.)

Click here to contact Peter Bucci.

To read the original version of this story, please click here.

*What do you think of this article?
Send us your feedback!*

Submit Feedback

ARTICLE OPTIONS
PREVIOUS PRINT DATE EMAIL NEXT